THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1863.

We publish to-day a sympathetic little poem entitled the 'Soldier's Return.' It breathes the spirit of a true and loving woman. We hope to hear often from the fair and gifted "BELLE."

Second Ward Club Meeting.

The Second Ward Democratic Club will meet at the Old Montgomery Guard Armory, S. E. corner of First and St. Clair, this (Thursday) evening, at 74 . o'clock. A full attendance is desired.

The Post is one of the most violent war papers in Massachusetts, and was one of the two Northern "Democratic" papers which opposed the organizing of that party about a year ago, and denounced the "Democratic Address." It now keeps company that city "It one class of children are allowed to Neither of them is entitled to speak for or posed. The "Abolition emblems," mark it well, to the Democracy.

The facts assumed by this paper are utterly at variance with the truth. "A large majority of the Democrats of New Hampehire and Connecticut" did not yield to the "minority which held extreme views." On the contrary, it is well known that "the prominent and intelligent" Democrats of Connecticut did their utmost to hold on to the policy of the Post, but that when the masses-the people-came to the Convention, the aforesaid "prominent and intelligent" Democratic "leaders" were obliged to yield to the majority, and adopt a sound Demooratic platform.

One thing is certain; if the Boston Post, or any other paper, expects the Democratic party of Ohio and the West—and we quote the words endorsed by itself-"to effectually operate with Lancous whenever and however it shall be found necessary," it will be utterly disappointed. We concur with the Columbus Statesman that "seventy-five in every hundred of the people of Ohio are for peace" -of course, The Fifth Ward Club, honorable peace and Union. At any rate, it is certain that the first of them had already sailed for Port Hudson before the New York correspondents who brought up the details of the engagement bad left, and that Admiral Dupont made no secret of his intention to follow speedily with the rest. And so ends the effort on which ever since Fredericksburg the hopes of the loyal have been buoyed. All winter we were told that in a few weeks the iron-clads would be ready to reduce Charleston. Operance after anoth er was assigned for the delay, but still we were AT THE OLD PRICES assured that Hunter and Dupont were moving cantiously that they might move surely, and that they would only begin the attack when they had the absolute guaranty of success. And still there came nows of more and ever-growing rebel defenses. At last we have the attack, two hours lighting, and a return to Whose fault it is, it were perhaps hardly wise yet to attempt deciding. When those who were on the ground differ so widely, it is as well not to undertake settling the responsibility in Washington—at least till we get official light. Mesers Villard and Swinton of official light. Mesers Villard and Swinton of the New York Tribune and Times, to whom we are indebted for the earliest details, and who are eminently reputable and trustworthy journalists, unite in wholly exonerating Ad-miral Dupout. Mr. Fulton, the leading editor of the Baltimore American, and a gentleman in whose statements and judgment the utmost reliance is always placed, almost accuses Ad miral Dupont of treachery, and very plainly intimates his belief that Sumter might have been reduced if he had wanted to do it while this view is partially confirmed by the well known "Carleton" (Mr. Chas. C., Coffin) of the Boston Journal, than whom the read-ing public has no more accurate and trust-worthy observation in its service. "These men were all there—how can we here without forther light decide between them." further light decide between them?

Whether we failed, however, because failur was a necessity, or because success was not desired, there can be no question. I presume, as to the result. V/hatever our iron-clads may or may not be sole to do, it is certain that for weeks if not months to come they will not again be matched against the British dafenses of Charleston.

If that fact is well assured to na, will it not be equally so to the rebels? And if they feel confident they are not soon to be attacked in Charleston, will they not speedily remove their troops to some other point, where they think there is more danger ?

To me it seems that the repulse at Charles-ton changes the whole face of the Eastern campaign. The uniform policy of the rebels has been to secure a division of our forces, and then to concentrate their own. Why is it not probable, therefore, that twenty or thirty
